

Search Teams Give Up Hope of Finding Social Chairs

(Green Room) – After months of unsuccessful expeditions into jungles and swamps across the world, as well as a 10-day dig through a landfill in Northwest Indiana, a spokesman for President Gilbert announced that the House had officially called off the search for missing Social Chairs Emily Pelka and Rachel Berkowitz, who have not been to House Meeting in months. The announcement came after officials confirmed that metal wreckage found in the ocean off Indonesia was from Adam Air flight 574, and not from the social chairs, as some had feared. “At this point, we do not know where the Social Chairs are,” the spokesman said. “Officially, they are now are presumed dead or in their rooms.”

The announcement seemed to pass quietly over the heads of most House residents, who had long ago learned to live in a world without organized House events. “Back in the day, the Social Chairs would take us to educational things, like that trip to the Aquarium to see a Beluga,” said first-year Joshua Knox, who credited the trip with getting him an A- in BIOS-29312 Lifecycle of the Beluga Whale. “Now, things are less organized, but we still have time for edutainment. For instance, Aniel Baron and I now just go outside behind Snell and shoot guns straight up into the air and then stand there and watch the bullets fall back down to Earth,” he said. Mr. Knox then declined to comment on why he had recently started wearing an eyepatch. Other students, not willing to give up on the idea of leaving Hyde Park, have taken trip-planning in their own hands. One group of first-years, for instance, organized a trip to Somalia over the January 6-7 weekend, though their failure to return has caused some to worry, especially after many Hitchcock residents identified Robert Grider as the titular figure in the popular new YouTube video “Westerner Steps on Landmine – Hilarity Ensues”.

Other students take a more hopeful approach. “There are House elections coming up soon,” said first-year Max Falkowitz. “I’m sure we’ll elect new Social Chairs who will actually do something. Now if you’ll excuse me, my friends and I are going to amuse ourselves by imitating the Saddam Hussein execution.”

Schedule. Of Events.

Monday:

All day: no class

2:00 PM: Ice Skating with Niel Raman.

Later: Keynote Address by the President of the NAACP at Rockefeller.

11:30 PM: Midnight Mile with Luke Joyner

Tuesday:

10:00: Retro Cartoon Night. Biker Mice from Mars. I picked up a copy of this on VHS at my local dollar store once like eight years ago. It's fairly good.

Thursday:

10:00 PM: Next House Meeting

All Week:

Apply to be a Tour Guide at the admissions office.

Apply to HARC with new ideas for inter-house events. They'll give you FREE MONEY for it.

Have complaints about Transport, or an opinion about Gender Neutral Housing? Tell Bob Knox: he cares!

Next Week:

House Elections

Poetry Slam vs Rickert. Possibly in the Green Room.