Scavenger Hunt Victory Ignites Social Revolution

Peace Room, 15 May 2008-

In the wake of Snell-Hitchcock's dramatic 800-point Scavenger Hunt victory, the rest of campus has dramatically upgraded its opinion of the residents of the hall. Despite having previously viewed Snell-Hitchcockians as a socially challenged group of hyper-academic withdrawn misfits, both professors and fellow students now cannot but constantly express admiration for the residents of the ancient houses. The admiration has now begun to extend into actions, with others making way to aid and integrate Snell-Hitchcock students into the broader community.

Says one anonymous Psi U member between vomiting attempts: "previously, I thought that Snell-Hitchcock was a bunch of ugly social retards incapable of entering into non-dormcestuous relationships, but now I recognize that they are ugly sexually and socially incompetent retards who can build a zeusaphone and unicycle inside of it; so they're totally fucking hot. If anyone there wants to have a long talk, my phone number is [XXXXXXX]." Phone interviews with representatives of Alpha Delt, AEPi, Delta U and Sigma Phi generated like praise for the sexual and social exploits of residents of the Dual Dormitory. FiJi members, speaking on deep background, admitted that "frankly, the reason the frats hate Snell-Hitchcock is none of us will ever be as hot as Max Gallop, and none of our parties will be half as fun as Dix and Grider's. Sorry for all the misdirected hate, but at least we're coming clean now: will you forgive us?"

Speaking to his 240-person class Introduction to Microeconomics Class Monday afternoon, professor Allen Sanderson excused scavies from responsibility for week six and seven homework and class materials. "Previously, I believed this class was about educating students in economics, as part of the duty of the school; but now I recognize that building a monowheel lined with bacon is not only a critical part of the Chicago experience, but that it is entirely legitimate to not do one's homework on the subject; and I further recognize that it is critical to get incredibly drunk to celebrate this and then ditch class the next day because of your high-class hangover, all of which is to say is all scavies get their grades moved up, unless they're from Broover."

speaking through an anatomically correct scav porn spokesman released a terse statement that: "The University Police regrets our efforts to impede the progress of groups of dumpster diving thieves in the wee hours of the morning, recognizing the importance of stealing toilets and breaking them with a sledgehammer. With traditional Bedouins in Hyde Park, why don't we just form the Arab Legion 2.0, and hand over policing to them? You rock."

Representatives of Bartlett Dinning, speaking at a news avail in front of the pasta station, praised Snell-Hitchcock's 'Army Dillo' and Max Palevsky's 'The Audacity of Pope' avowing that "We always provide friendly service and superb food, but figuring out what to do with vast purchases by individuals who haven't showered, slept, or changed in four days is really fun for us; this is doubly true when those individuals have just roasted a perfectly spherical lamb over an open fire. We love you now and forever."

Wall Street recruiters speaking at CAPS praised Snell-Hitchcock's method of career development: "Frankly, having other people spend lots of money so that you can go to Vegas swimsuit competitions to make pornographic comic books about a worm is exactly what investment banking is all about; and if you just mention that you spent spring quarter working on those exploits we'll overlook the failing grades in spring courses like a shot - employees who will goof off and do jack shit without coming to their jobs for a week is exactly what we look for in today's hypercompetitive marketplace."

The Chicago Maroon, an undergraduate tablet, headlined this week's paper with a congratulatory letter to Snell-Hitchcock scavies, including notes that "We know you're totally insecure stuck-up humorless assholes, and still are; but the intrinsic humor value in a cut down Balloon taking out our newspaper delivery person, who wasn't even ours for the good application's sake, is really amazing, and we love it, so we'll write well now."

Various PreMeds across campus were simply struck dumb by Snell-Hitchcock's exploits, one of the remarking after days of silence: "Two DeLoreans ferrying umbrella carrying escorts? My life is meaningless. I want to go now and pick flowers."

Speaking Collectively Monday noon, the campus confined its statement to: "Wow, Snell-Hitchcock gives us 25-foot wicker Penis Envy."
