"A new dawn is upon us." Those were the words of Hitchcock resident Susannah Wang in response to the recent emancipation of @HitchcockHouse. A longtime absentee of House Meeting, Susannah has been informed of events within the House community via Twitter. "It's not that there was a dearth of tweets, but rather that they were dry and emotionless."

Early last year, an nameless and self-verified French woman harnessed complete control of @Hitchcockhouse, throwing the entirety of Hitchcock into a social recession. Countless residents suspended their social networking in a feeble attempt to recover from the devastating blow. Such hardships even lead to an underground resistance headed by @Hitchcock411.

Fortunately, the tides began to ebb this summer, as the Parisian potentate presented the released the account to House O-Staff. Rumored leader of the 411 movement Jonah Rabb recalls, "I look down at my phone one afternoon, and there it was. I couldn't believe my eyes. After all this time."

This turn of luck only marks the beginning for @HitchcockHouse, as leaders from around the Sections have commenced deliberations for new Twitter legislation. "For now, the account sits in a state of stagnation. It's going to take some time to repair the scars," Rabb stated in an unofficial Bartlett talk. "We've been so focused on the fight. And now, we're not sure if it was worth it."

Regardless of the wavering sentiments, as Hitchcocker move forward this year they can be sure that a little bird with be fluttering right behind them. #feedtwitter

Who is Adam the First Year?

Recent public polling has revealed a shadowy figure galloping towards the limelight of House Politics. Just who is this dark horseman? That'd be "Adam the First Year."

"He's definitely a first year," revealed Hitchcock's newest fashionista Avery Robinson. "I'd even go as far as to say that his name is Adam." Robinson further divulged that "Adam the First Year" may not actually exist. "He's like an O-mance. One week you're nearly positive that it's going to be around forever, and the next, you have no recollection of it even happening."

Whether this Sasquatchian entity will ever lift his hood still remains to be seen, but one thing is for sure: He's out there.

Adam the First Year's representatives refused to answer The Herald's calls.
